The Sri Lankan Tamil diaspora was well established in Malaysia, Singapore and the United Kingdom prior to the 1983 Black July induced dispersal of refugees and asylum claimants in India, Europe, and Canada. Although relatively recent in origin, this subgroup had well-established communities in these host countries prior to the 1983 pogroms.

For me, the ethnic conflict is now a myth. As a Tamil, I don't feel in minority. Locals don't ask us if we are Tamil or Sinhalese. They simply ask where we are from. It's rather us, from the Diaspora, who ask if they are Tamil or Sinhalese; this maybe because our parents have transmitted to us their apprehension of the other.
